October Bulletin 2011

It is with great joy that I continue on with a story from my last bulletin. My scarf makers who are heading to Carnegie Hall, New York, early next year ran into an old and very dear friend. Isabel rang me this morning with excitement in her voice about a friend who was telling her a story of alpaca wool and scarves. The penny dropped and all of a sudden a new circle of friends and stories waiting to be told has been established. It also transpired through the conversation about alpacas that my shearer has just travelled to Brisbane to shear an elderly sheep and aged goat on top of Eildon Hill in Windsor.

Meanwhile in down town Obi Obi, the geese are nesting and consequently the vegie garden is looking wonderful! I am also quietly confident about next year's olive harvest as the crop of flowers on the trees has been incredibly plentiful. However I will not mention it again as there is a long way to go until picking which, as usual will be in late March and early April. Olive oil and tea sales continue to climb and the crisp, clear spring days have meant that we have been able to keep up with the continual stream of demand.

The other gratifying news is that Obi Obi Essentials was nominated for the Excellence in Business Awards, (Food and Beverage category). We are now one of the finalists. Congratulations to all those others who find themselves in this position and all the very best.

From our place to yours,

Alexina.
